DEPARTMENT OF STATE

Dear Mr. Streibert:

I am much concerned about the steadily deteriorating public attitude in Iceland toward the need for a sustained Western defense effort, which is being specifically expressed in demands that the implementation of the U.S.-Icelandic Defense Agreement of May, 1951, be altered in such a way as would drastically curtail the scope of U.S. operating rights in Iceland. This has developed particularly, and rather spectacularly, since the new Government was formed in Iceland in September.

The Icelandic public has never been markedly sympathetic to the presence of U.S. defense forces in Iceland. The Icelandic's basic "anti-foreign army attitude" has received considerable impetus from the Soviet peace drive which followed Stalin's death and on which the Communists in Iceland have capitalized. This drive has persuaded many Icelanders--and the belief has mushroomed--that the reasons for putting up with the "evil of a foreign army" have become less cogent. In fact, complacency has set in to an alarming degree, based on what appears to be a rather widespread impression that the cold war, if not over, is tapering off comfortably. While thus far only a minority would abrogate the Defense Agreement, a majority is apparently in favor of making greater demands on the U.S. and qualifying more sharply the terms under which we are "permitted" to defend Iceland.

The course of the Government in this small community is likely to be swayed by the popular opinion steadily being whipped up by elements either hostile to the U.S. or unsympathetic to the idea of integrated Western defense. Our USIA program in Iceland is currently running on two cylinders, relative to the job it should be doing. We have a tremendous public relations job in Iceland that we are trying to do with pennies. The Russians are making an all-out effort including the sending of concert artists and "cultural" propagandists into Iceland in numbers, and these are being well received. During the past year, our one achievement in this line has been the visit of the Air Force Band in February 1953. USIA, Reykjavik, has lost one American and four locals in the RIF.

Our Minister to Iceland, Mr. Edward B. Lawson, is presently in Washington on consultation, and I believe it would be desirable for you to see him with a view to reinforcing our information program in Iceland to meet the serious situation which now exists there.

While I am aware that you appreciate the situation and are studying it, I feel you will find the talk with Minister Lawson very profitable in your approach to the problem.

Sincerely yours,

/s/ Walter B. Smith
